

The mission of JOGNN is to advance the health and health care of women, childbearing families, and newborns through the publication of peer-reviewed nursing and interdisciplinary scholarship.

The first issue of JOGNN was published in 1972, and 2021 marks the journal's 50th anniversary. To celebrate this unique and important milestone, JOGNN's Editorial Advisory Board and Editors invite authors to look to the past and to the future regarding practice developments and progress specifically related to health and health care of women, childbearing families, and newborns. Of special interest are manuscripts with historical perspectives on how nursing research has influenced practice and how the roles of nurses and advanced practice nurses have changed over time. Authors may address nursing care, innovations in health care, changes in nursing education, development of nursing scholarship, and health care policy. Across JOGNN's content areas, potential topics include but are not limited to the following:

General Topics

- Effects of nursing advocacy on women's health issues, including childbearing
- Changing acronyms and labels within health care
- Climate change as it relates to maternal-child health and childbearing
- Effects of immigration on maternal/newborn/family outcomes
- Changing demographics of childbearing women
- Globalization of families
- Social determinants of health
- Ethical situations and implicit bias considerations of nursing care
- The potential of nurses and midwives to improve access and continuity of health care
- Moral injury from unresolved trauma in perinatal care environments
- Safety for consumers and providers of health care including regulatory, psychological, spiritual, mental, financial, and physical concerns
- Technology development and its judicious application
- Regulatory and payment issues across the continuum of care

Childbearing and Maternity Care

- Nursing interventions to reduce maternal morbidity and mortality
- Violence and abuse (reproductive coercion, teen dating violence, domestic abuse in pregnancy)
- Postpartum depression/anxiety
- Women's mental health related to delayed childbearing

Women's Health

- Cardiovascular disease
- Urinary incontinence
- Sexuality and aging
- Sexuality after cancer or with chronic disease
- Health of LGBTQIA individuals (specifically related to peri- or post-menopause)
- Sex and gender differences

Care of Normal and High-risk Newborns

- Breastfeeding
- Breastmilk for high-risk/premature infants
- Infants' experience of pain and nursing interventions
- Neonatal opioid withdrawal
- Newborn infection and prevention
- Palliative care
- Respiratory care
- Skin care

Manuscripts may be submitted through June 1, 2021 and will be peer reviewed consistent with all manuscripts submitted to JOGNN. The cover letter should specifically note that the submission is in response to the call. Accepted manuscripts will be published in Volume 50 in a special section titled Looking Back – Looking Forward.
